

Kwame, 'Foot massage for a hawker'

Hi Elena, this is the report on the first project i did. Am very sorry for the delay, we have had serious light and internet problems of late.

i will say hawking is a way of sending small markets to the street. the market could be on your head or hands depending on what you are selling. It is a business which involves little capital in Ghana, hawking is one of the known jobs .People mostly indulged in this business are most who rages from the ages of five years to 20 years. this is due to the fact that most of them come from poor homes and can't afford to pay school fees therefore the need sell on the street to make money.

I had a fruit hawker help me with my project. she came every morning to sell fruits in my house so i seized the opportunity to discuss it with her and she agreed to do it i told her i was going to give her foot massage and take photos whilst the massage went on. she asked if i was going to sell the picture but told her no but send it to some one outside the country. she agreed and asked me to get her copies.

the massage went very well. the lady was very comfortable at first but started panicking and wanted leave when people started staring at her, she asked if i was getting it done sooner. i told her yes which made her relaxed. she felt very ticklish every time my hand touched her feet. i told her to hold on just a bit and she did, at the end everything went very well.

her reaction at first was clear she didn't want to take part, especially when she heard pictures would be taken. Her reason was i was going to sell her picture to make money. During the massage she asked me to be quick since she needed to go back to her business before the sun got to hot.

i didn't really encounter any difficulties apart from the fact that she wanted to leave a soon as she saw people walking and wanted to leave whilst her foot was been massaged.

this is how it went with the first project i did.

thank you.
